The IIC Cell of Trinity Institute of Professional Studies, Dwarka, attended the session on "Opportunities for Students & Faculties: Early Stage Entrepreneurs" began with a warm welcome and introduction of the esteemed speaker, Prof. Vinay Nangia, who is a recognized authority in the field of entrepreneurship and innovation. Prof. Nangia commenced the session by explaining the fundamental difference between accelerators and incubators. He emphasized that while accelerators are time-bound programs focused on rapid growth, incubators offer ongoing support to nurture early-stage startups.

Prof. Nangia detailed the selection process for these programs, highlighting the key criteria such as business idea viability, team strength, and market potential. He also elaborated on the various resources provided by accelerators and incubators, including funding, mentorship, networking opportunities, and technical support. These resources, he explained, are crucial for the development and scaling of startups.

The session included an in-depth discussion of several case studies of successful startups that had graduated from accelerator and incubator programs. These examples served to illustrate the tangible benefits and potential outcomes of participating in such programs. Prof. Nangia also addressed common challenges faced by startups in these environments, such as equity dilution and competitive pressures, and provided practical advice on how to navigate these issues.

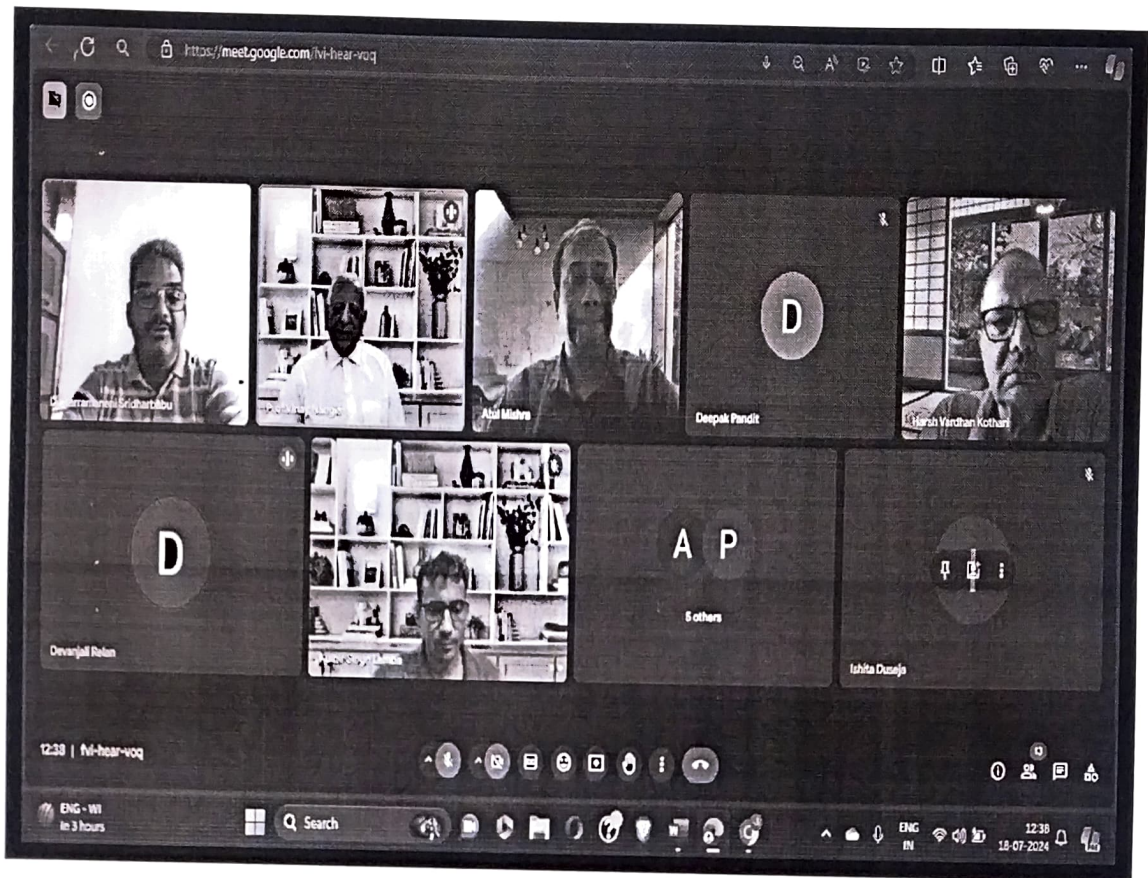

The event concluded with an interactive Q&A session, where participants had the opportunity to engage directly with Prof. Nangia. This session was highly beneficial, as it allowed attendees to seek personalized advice and gain deeper insights into specific aspects of accelerators and incubators. Overall, the event was highly informative and met its objectives, leaving participants better equipped to explore and leverage these platforms for their entrepreneurial ventures.
